

CIDE faculty who have registered for participating in the CIDE 2015 Summer Research Program for UCLA students
Mexico City

Professor	Short description of Research	Topics and Link
Carlos Vilalta	Carlos Vilalta is professor of research methods and coordinator of the Information Bank for Applied Research in Social Sciences (BIIACS) at the Centro de Investigacion y Docencia Economicas (CIDE) in Mexico City. He is currently a visiting fellow at the Center for US-Mexican Studies at the University of California in San Diego (UCSD). Vilalta has held visiting positions at the University of Cambridge, McGill University, University of Missouri-St. Louis, Washington University in St. Louis, University of Houston and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He received his Ph.D. in urban studies from Portland State University in 2002 and his master's degree in urban studies from El Colegio de México in 1998. His research areas of interest are the spatial and temporal elements of crime and fear of crime, crime statistics and surveys, crime prevention policy, and prison populations in Latin America.	Crime; Spatial Statistics and Geographical Information Systems. For more details see http://www.cide.edu/perfil/?IdInvestigador=1163
Juan Salgado	I work at CIDE's Legal Studies Department. Since 2003 I have been doing research on comparative police reform, public security and criminology. In the period previous to 2008 I visited several countries in North and Latin America, Africa, Asia and Europe to meet experts on this field from universities, civil society, governmental institutions, and especially police forces, with a grant from the Open Society Foundations. I am presently finishing a book on police reform from an international perspective and two papers comparing the Tokyo and The Hague Police Departments, and another comparing civilian supervision of police bodies in Brazil, Colombia and Mexico. I teach the course on Criminology and Public Security for our LLB and PhD students. I can provide advice to students interested in public security, organized crime and policing, both locally, regionally and globally.	Crime, Judicial Reform, Civil and Human Rights. For more details see http://www.cide.edu/perfil/?IdInvestigador=1194
Lorena Ruano	Lorena Ruano was born in Mexico City, studied International Relations at El Colegio de México, and got her D. Phil at Oxford. She has been a Professor at the Department of International Relations at CIDE since 2002. She specializes in European Politics, Regional Integration, relations between Europe and Latin America, and International Relations History. She currently leads CIDE's team within Atlantic Future , a large research project funded by the European Commission, involving 14 institutions around the Atlantic basin.	Comparative Policy in the EU, European Integration, International Relations, Relations between the EU and Mexico and Latin America, http://www.cide.edu/perfil/?IdInvestigador=163
Kim Nolan	Doctor Kimberly Nolan Garcia is an assistant professor in the Division of International Relations. she specializes in labor rights issues , both internationally and within Mexico. She also studies integration in North America and US trade policy.	International Political Economy, US policy towards Latin America, Transnational Social Movements, Labor Rights, North America. See http://www.cide.edu/perfil/?IdInvestigador=1216

Camila Pastor	Camila Pastor de Maria Campos joined the History Division of CIDE (Centro de Investigación y Docencia Económicas) in Mexico City as professor and researcher after receiving her PhD in sociocultural anthropology from UCLA (University of California, Los Angeles). Her research lies at the crossroads of disciplines and geographies: transnational sovereignties, mediation, hierarchy in postcolonial settings. She has taught graduate and undergraduate seminars at UCLA, CIDE, Colegio de Mexico and Instituto Mora. She has recently completed an ethnographic census of the Muslim population in Mexico and is working on a research project on performance and prostitution in the Mandate Mediterranean. Her first book explores the trajectories of migrants circulating between the Middle East and Middle America since the late nineteenth century, with an emphasis on processes of racialization and the intersection of transnational frames generated by migrants in transit, French imperial practice and Middle American postcolonial societies. She is the author of multiple articles and book chapters, including “The Transnational Imagination: Twentieth Century Networks and Institutions of the Mashreqi Migration to Mexico”, Palma Journal 11 (2009):31-71, "Inscribing Difference: Maronites, Jews and Arabs in Mexican Public Culture and French Imperial Practice", Latin American & Caribbean Ethnic Studies, Vol. 6 (2011): 169-18, “Guests of Islam: Conversion and the Institutionalization of Islam in Mexico”, In Crescent of Another Horizon, Maria del Mar Logroño, Paulo Pinto and John Taufik Karam (eds), (Texas University Press, 2014) and “The Mashreq Unbound: Arab Modernism, Criollo Nationalism and the Discovery of America by the Turks”, forthcoming in Mashreq Mahjar.	http://www.cide.edu/perfil/?IdInvestigador=1204
Daniel Ventosa	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • General Research Interests: Time Series Econometrics (asymptotics and empirical studies). • Particular topics: Asymptotics under nonstationarity, Power-Purchasing Parity Hypothesis, Feldstein-Horioka Paradox, Money Neutrality, Income Elasticity of Taxes, Sea Level – Temperature Relationship (Climatic Change). • Potential benefits for students: (i) practice in Matlab / Latex programming, (ii) Mexico’s time series handling, (iii) standard and fractional cointegration empirical analysis. Further information: www.ventosa-santaularia.com	Pollution, Econometrics and Statistics. For more details see http://www.cide.edu/perfil/?IdInvestigador=1273
David Heres	Dr. Heres works in environmental economics and urban economics. He has conducted laboratory experiments to evaluate environmental policies and is interested in combining field experiments with stated-preference methods to elicit values for environmental goods. He is involved in studies that require observational data to obtain values for air quality and public transportation accessibility in Mexico City, as well as the potential impacts of transportation policies on vehicle usage in the US and the abatement cost of carbon sequestration in Mexican forests.	Economics of Energy, Sustainability, Transport; Experimental Economics. See http://www.cide.edu/perfil/?IdInvestigador=1270

CIDE faculty who have registered for participating in the CIDE 2015 Summer Research Program for UCLA students

Aguascalientes Campus

Professor	Short description of Research	Topics and Link
Guus Zwitter	Coordinator of the CIDE Program on Drug Policy	CIDE Program on Drug Policy
Laura Atuesta		CIDE Program on Drug Policy
Edgar Guerra	Dr. Guerra works for CIDE’s Drug Policy Program (PPD) and holds a PhD in Sociology. He specializes in social movements and political violence. His current research project aims to study the formation, organization and operation of the Self-Defense Groups in Michoacán, as well as their effects and social, cultural and political consequences. Furthermore, it aims to understand the interwovenness of this process with the construction of the State and in particular with the state- and federal drug policy. The internship position is open for students in political science, law, sociology or Latin American studies and who aim to pursue a career in drug policy. The intern will act as Dr. Guerra’s research assistant and contribute to his project through independent desk research. This work entails literature searches, the development of a news archive, assistance with the filing of information requests, the preparation of fieldwork as well as the transcription of interviews and qualitative data analysis. The interns will, furthermore, have the opportunity to participate in the PPD’s Seminar and to contribute articles related to drug policy to the PPD’s online platform Animal Político. Fluency in both oral and written Spanish are required. The ideal candidate will have some work experience related to research and archiving research, with attention to detail and high organizational and planning skills. The PPD is a multidisciplinary research program that is made up of lawyers, economists, social scientist, political scientist, health scientists and anthropologists. An internship at the PPD implies working in an international team at the vanguard of drug policy research and change.	CIDE Program on Drug Policy http://ppd.cide.edu/edgar-guerra